PROCEEDINGS OF THE JEFFERSON COUNTY INSTITUTE

of reading matter. A knowledge of the nation's history might be grasped easily through proper reading. Dr. Ellis then pointed out the "Duties of American Citizenship," showing that the inculcation of obedience in the pupils at school is of great importance in securing obedience to the law. Lastly the speaker stated that the kind of punishment in schools should be conformable to the specific kind of government in the schools. In closing the teachers discussed moral and religious training in the schools.

PRIMARY SECTION.

The primary section was first addressed by Miss Weiler, who gave the following summary of necessary work in primary drawing: Teachers should show appreciation of effort; teach children to be their own critics; three elements in drawing, action, color, form; interest the key note in drawing; drawing period not to exceed 15 minutes; individuality desired; teach simplicity in all things. In the address of Zaner, practical hints were given for teaching the child to learn the difficult art of writing. Advised using large writing and use of blackboard. Normal size in writing should not be commenced until fourth year.

The Tuesday afternoon session opened with the main floor and gallery filled with townspeople and throughout the afternoon the interest manifested was remarkable. Both the instructors and entertainers were listened to with rapt attention.

The opening address was made by Prof. C. P. Zaner. Zaner is reputed the finest penman in the United States and has the subject at his finger tips. Throughout the period allotted him he dwelt on the need of teaching the manual part, as well as the intellectual part of penmanship, while never forgetting that fine penmanship is practically worthless unless possessed by a man with good gray matter in his head.

Prof. Yoder again took the stage and in a few minutes had the vast room ringing with melody. He is a wonder in his power to enthuse and lead a big audience.

Following the address of Mr. Zaner, the county superintendent introduced Dr. C. C. Ellis, and the round of applause that greeted his appearance on the stage spoke eloquently of the place he won in the hearts of the teachers by his masterful lecture Monday afternoon. Ellis' address yesterday was along the same lines, and it was as vital in every part to the parent as to the school teacher. He made a plea for the physical conservation of the child, for a better understanding of his buoyant nature and a more careful study of the motives that lead him to become a human inter-ception mark. He showed that the work of the teacher is not bounded by the four walls of the school room, but may go with a pupil through a long life to cheer or discourage him. Dr. Ellis has a rich fund of illustration drawn from his own varied experience as a student, teacher, manager and college professor. No more popular instructor has ever appeared before a Jefferson county institute.

After a session of singing led by Prof. Yoder, Miss Kling was again called to the stage and for the balance of the afternoon gave the audience readings from famous authors. Her first selection was from Thomas Bailey Aldrich, her second a Russian tale, and the climax was reached in an intensely dramatic rendering of the beautiful old biblical tale of "Judith and Holofernes." Miss Kling has had few superiors in her line in Reynoldsville and the teachers regret that she could not remain for the balance of the institute.

GOVERNOR GLENN.

The evening lecture by Ex-Governor Robert B. Glenn, of North Carolina, drew out an audience even larger than the concert of the opening night, and the orator did not disappoint them. Glenn is not the ordinary type of lecturer. He stands for something and he speaks with a meaning that will linger in the memory of all who heard him. He is a broad-minded man, a worthy descendant of Washington Irving, whom he numbers among his ancestors.

THE DIRECTORS' COVENTION.

ORDER OF OWLS OPENED THEIR NEW ROOMS FRIDAY

Now Have One of the Finest Club Rooms in This Part of the State.

The nest of the Order of Owls in Reynoldsville was formally opened last Friday night. There are few club rooms in this part of the state that are more tastefully finished or that can afford the users greater satisfaction. From the entrance to the kitchen in the rear, the second floor of the Odd Fellows building has been re-furnished and fitted in the best in the way of furniture and fixtures that money could buy.

In the parlors in the front of the building, the floors are finished in imitation of oak, with rich Bandar and Wilton rugs on the floor. In the ladies' parlor the furniture is mahogany, in the gentlemen's parlor a tasteful design of mission furniture, in oak, while in the library adjoining the table is quartered oak, the chairs weathered oak. Later on it is the intention to equip the library with a line of reading matter.

Part of what was formerly the banquet room has been turned into a billiard room. The tables have not arrived at the present writing. The walls are papered with a rich design of gold and green, while costly gas chandeliers add the general effect. Just in the rear of this room, separated by a low partition, is the card room, equipped with tables and chairs in the old mission style. The chairs throughout are upholstered in leather. In the rear of the building is the steward's quarters and the secretary's office. The latter position is now held by Fred H. Butler and his quarters are worthy the private office of a Wall Street king. The furniture is in the Early English style, a rug of body Brussels is on the floor, and a fine desk will be installed for his convenience.

The Reynoldsville branch of this order now has about 400 members and has a bright prospect. It must be said to the high credit of this lodge that one of the first acts of their official sessions was to pass a resolution that the sale of liquor in their rooms shall be governed by the laws regulating its sale in licensed hotels, and that when the hotel bars are legally closed, on Sundays, holidays, etc., no liquor shall be sold in the Owl rooms.

Horwitz's Dept. Store I. O. O. F. Building - 3 doors from Postoffice Saturday was certainly the turning of a new page in this business volume bound in good cheer. Flocks of the patient people who bore the inconveniences so long at our old store visited us Saturday and told us that what we have done repays them for all they did. Really we cannot thank the good people, enough for their goodness and patience. Great As Our Store Is Great in plainness, great in unity, great in convenience, great in healthfulness, it is truly a public utility, conserving the public needs at every known point, simple, strong, safe as it is with no other store in Jefferson county to compare with it, it is only worthy of the people it shall serve, and not a bit too good, too strong, too safe for them. With this store comes less necessity for high cost insurance, lessened expense of maintenance in some parts, no repairing and the larger sales we have been making, now to be greatly increased, will insure LOWER PRICES than any other store in Reynoldsville. Make yourself and your visiting friends at home in looking over this new store while the house is new. It is the same old family living in it whom you have known for so many years. HORWITZ'S DEPT.
